New Bedford April 7 '42

Dear Anne,

I wrote to Caroline by yesterdays mail, telling her to send the letter to you, though there was nothing in it yesterday I went I had my two nine-penny calicoes cut, at night took tea with Mrs Emerson & had a very good time To day I mortified myself with sewing all the morning. Dined at the Howlands, found Mrs H. very unwell. Called at the Congdons I found them all gone to quarterly meeting. Called at Mary Eddy's who is to be confined the 1st of June. Took tea with Mrs Russell a cousin of the Robesons. Andrew & his wife & Elvira Rodman were there & several others - Had a very pleasant time & the Robesons brought me home. Old Andrew is worth his weight in gold — Before I left town a letter came from the Gibbons, with an invitation for you & Caroline to come on to them during the annual meeting. I think you had better go. If you know have money, & it will reconcile me very much to staying here to know that somebody is having fun through my means. This is my advice — Abby sends the first part of the Exercise

Book with her love &c Mrs Beecher is pretty well, but the baby was sick today these times distress Abby & she really loses flesh upon them. I, like Lizzy when the dinner was poor, go to walk upon the common —

Dear Caroline,

Will you send this package to Weymouth the first opportunity, for Annie wants her Exercise Book, besides I want her to make up her mind to go to N. York. I am in a waiting state for Lizzy's gowns. Put in hooks & eyes & every thing necessary but cord for I am entirely out of all these things. If you see Gillespie ask her what sleeves are to be worn, for I shall not have my silk one altered, or the new ones cut till I hear. I am sorry to make you so much trouble, but I must know this last. ever yours &c —

I go to the post office every day, for I worry about H & M some, but not as much as one would think —
